competitiveness in a global perspective is a major issue on the agenda of the European Union and European industry The question of competitiveness is often related to continual technological change and changing work structures to create more flexible and adaptive work places But these changes are in themselves insufficient to meet the demands of a turbulent business environment if they are not brought about in close relationship with and anchored to the development of the human resource potential Technological innovation and modern post Tayloristic work structures place new demands on workers Workers abilities and competencies must be raised in virtually every sphere in what are termed the new key core competencies related to knowledge and cognitive skills social skills general and work related personality characteristics together with a high level of technological ability At the same time to make optimal use of the human potential the way in which work is organised and accordingly the way in which people are managed must allow workers to develop and use the required competencies An integrated Human Resource Development approach is needed in which workers abilities and competencies take a central place European competitiveness from this perspective implies a strategic choice by European companies and policy makers to invest in people and their potential abilities
