The Labour of Words in Higher Education Sarah Hayes, 2019-01-28 As Higher Education has come to be valued for its direct contribution to the global economy university policy discourse has reinforced this rationale In The Labour of Words in Higher Education Is it Time to Reoccupy Policy two globes are depicted One is a beautiful but complete artefact that markets a UK university The second sits on a European city street and is continually inscribed with the markings of passers by A distinction is drawn between the rhetoric of university McPolicy as a discourse that appears to no longer require input from humans and a more authentic approach to writing policy that acknowledges the academic labour of staff and students in effecting change Inspired by the work of George Ritzer on the McDonaldisation of Society the term McPolicy is adopted by the author to describe a rational method of writing policy now widespread across UK universities Recent strategies on the student experience technology enhanced learning student engagement and employability are explored through a corpus based Critical Discourse Analysis CDA Findings are humourously compared to the marketing of consumer goods where commodities like cars are invested with human qualities such as ambition Similarly McPolicy credits non human strategies technologies and a range of socially constructed buzz phrases with the human qualities and labour activities that would normally be enacted by staff and students This book is written for anyone with an interest in the future of universities It concludes with suggestions of ways we might all reoccupy McPolicy

Inside IMSA's Legendary GTP Race Cars J. A. Martin, Michael J. Fuller, Professional automobile racing has always been dominated by sanctioning bodies whose main goal was to ensure competition That has meant seeing that cars are well matched in body shape or chassis engine combinations or engine size But what about an all out competition in which one team's idea of the fastest race car could be pitted against another's regardless of mechanical parity This was what the International Motor Sports Association's IMSA Grand Touring Prototypes GTP race series was about The Series ran from 1981 to 1993 and it was one of the most exhilarating racing experiences of all time This book is the first to profile the amazing machines that resulted from the GTP's flat out competition among different and passionate ideas about what might be the fastest way around a track the V 12 with its better ground effect tunnels but higher center of gravity CG the flat six with its low CG but severely restricted ground effect tunnels and others that employed elaborate wings and air dams Here are the people behind this engineering free for all the culmination
