ABSTRACT. Staphylococcus aureus strains were isolated from the nasal cavities of patients with nasal polyps and from the nasal cavities of healthy subjects. The strains were tested for sensitivity to 14 antimicrobial agents. The results showed that the strains isolated from patients with nasal polyps were more resistant to antimicrobial agents than the strains isolated from healthy subjects. The results also showed that the strains isolated from patients with nasal polyps were more resistant to antimicrobial agents than the strains isolated from patients with sinusitis. The results suggest that the strains isolated from patients with nasal polyps may be more resistant to antimicrobial agents than the strains isolated from healthy subjects and patients with sinusitis.
