Response provides the most comprehensive body of knowledge available on the role of genetic and genomic variation in the individualization of drug therapies in cancer patients. As a consequence of the intrinsic chromosomal and genetic instability of the tumor genome, it is generally believed that tailoring of chemotherapy in cancer patients might be achieved by molecular analysis of patient tumor DNA. In addition to reduce the toxicity risk of patients, the tumor DNA information should be integrated with the available data on polymorphic drug-metabolizing enzyme and transporter genes mediating the exposure of patients to active drugs and/or their active metabolites. The chapters of this book clearly show how DNA information from both the host germline and the tumor should be taken into account for rational selection of drug therapies in cancer patients, an aspect that received little attention despite its importance. The availability of new molecular approaches to the selection of drug therapy is an emerging need because the traditional approach based on the evaluation of patient and tumor characteristics is clearly far from optimal. Many treated patients do not experience significant benefits from the treatment while they often experience moderate to severe toxicities. In addition, the development and clinical use of novel molecularly targeted agents alone or in combination with classical cytotoxic therapy requires the understanding of the molecular features of the tumors and the identification of tumor markers of response.

Other Gods and Idols Thomas A. Judge, 2019-02-21 This study questions why the relationship between the worship of other gods and the worship of idols within the Old Testament is difficult to define acknowledging how various traditions have seen these two issues as synonymous and others have viewed them as separate commandments Judge argues that there are four factors at play in this diversity He introduces the first three through an examination of the relationship between the prohibitions listed in the biblical text and the fourth through a study of the biblical depiction of the war against idols before and after the fall of the Northern Kingdom Judge argues that texts depicting the era before the fall provide a context in which there are strong grounds to distinguishing the worship of the wrong gods and the worship of the right God in the wrong way However texts depicting the era after the fall provide a context in which the issues appear to have been fused
