

Tigers | Nonfiction Reading Test 2

Who would win in a fight, a lion or a tiger? Well, it does not anything to do with the matter, the tiger would win. That's because tigers are the largest of all the species. They grow up to about four long and weigh as much as 600 lbs. The male tigers are about largest head size-wise. The only larger head measure are polar bears and grizzly bears. Tigers are not only large, they are also fast. They can sprint to 40 miles per hour for short distances and leap as far as 40 feet horizontally. This makes the surprisingly dangerous predator. You might not think that such large, fast, bloodthirsty creatures need help surviving, but they do. The tiger is an endangered species.

Despite all of the tiger's strengths, the status of the species is uncertain. Tigers face a very high risk of extinction. It is estimated that at the start of the 20th century, there were over 100,000 tigers living in the wild. By the end of the century, the number of tigers was down to approximately 3,000. Unfortunately, the most serious threats that tigers face come from man. In the past, people have used tigers for a variety of reasons. One with are trophies brought in around 1,000 lbs. That species is the Amur leopard, which lives in the mountains. Amur leopard tigers is primarily two types: hunting and displaying tigers.

Tigers are hunted for many reasons. People have long valued the beautiful striped skins. Although tigers were once found in many places in the world, tiger skins are worth around $10,000 on the black market. Though the skin would be valuable enough for many poachers, other parts of the tiger are also sought. In the past, tiger bones were used in traditional Chinese medicine. Some people in China and other Asian countries believe that various tiger parts have healing properties. Traditional Chinese medicine calls for the use of tiger bones, although other parts, in some preparations.

Tigers have also been hunted as game. In other words people hunted tigers solely for the thrill and excitement of killing them. Such killings took place in large areas during the 19th and early 20th centuries, when a single man might or might not see one tiger in a full day. In the past, tigers were hunted as game. Through the practice is much less popular today than it was in the past, it has not ceased entirely.

Humans have done considerable damage to the world's tiger population through hunting, but perhaps more damage has been caused through the destruction of habitat. Tigers once ranged widely across Asia, all the way from Turkey to the eastern coast of Russia. But over the past 100 years, tigers have lost 90% of their natural range. Instead of spreading all over very much Asia, the tiger population is now limited to small pockets in South and Southeast Asia. This is because humans have drastically changed the environment. Humans have built towns and cities. Roads and small systems were created as transport. These towns and cities. To find the people living in these towns, forests and fields have been cleared or converted to other uses. Large areas of land have been strip-mined for coal, metals, and other minerals such as oil. As a result, all of these activities have combined to reduce the number of tigers in the world.

A major obstacle to restoring tigers is the enormous amount of territory that each tiger requires. Each wild tiger demands between 700 and 1,000 square miles. Tigers are also both nocturnal and solitary animals. This means that they are predators of the area that they inhabit and they generally do not share with other tigers. Because tigers need so much territory, it is difficult for conservationists to acquire land enough to support a large population of tigers. Even when such large tracts of land are acquired, it is not easy to manage such large areas as game reserves. This is one way to preserve the wild tiger population without making large sacrifices.
