The most important findings were consistent: that the 1000-hour rule was followed following licensure in the United States and that those who were not able to do so were more likely to be employed in non-licensed positions. While the 1000-hour rule is not strictly enforced, it does encourage better preparation and training for new nurses.

100 years on from the suffrage Women's history has not always been a popular topic, but for the centenary of the 1918 Representation of the People Act, we have compiled a list of 100 women who have shaped the world we live in today. From the suffragettes to the suffragists, the list includes women who have made significant contributions to science, literature, politics, and more. The list is a testament to the resilience and achievements of women throughout history.

By the second night, Harry Hight of Acoustic Surge brought the string team off-camera. When Virginia Williams is being played, the superintendant of the string has hidden a thousand cameras to record the performance. The more recording, the better, he is convinced. (Continued on page 104)

In 1997, the Space Agency launched a satellite called Quetzalcoatl (named after the Aztec god of wind) to study the ozone layer. Ozone is a form of oxygen that is found in the atmosphere. It is important because it protects the Earth from the sun's harmful rays. The satellite was launched on 24 October 1997. It was the first Mexican satellite to be launched into space.
