Among the several genetic and drug-induced animal models of ADHD available, the inbred Spontaneously Hypertensive Rats (SHR) strain has often been considered the most validated model, since they 'naturally' display the main ADHD symptomatology, including hyperactivity, impulsivity and poorly sustained attention (Russell, 2007, Sagvolden et al., 2005). Although SHR's hyperactivity has been questioned – and almost exclusively appears in response to novelty and in comparison to Wistar-Kyoto rats (Ferguson and Cada, 2003) – the cognitive deficits of SHR have been extensively reported in several behavioral paradigms by our group (Pires et al., 2009, Prediger et al., 2005a, Prediger et al., 2005b) and others (De Bruin et al., 2003, Kantak et al., 2008, Nakamura-Palacios et al., 1996, Sagvolden and Xu, 2008). For this reason, the SHR strain is of interest in the study of neurobiological changes involved in ADHD and for testing of new therapeutic interventions for cognitive dysfunctions (Takahashi et al., 2008). Although different pharmacological approaches have been successfully tested in SHR, and therefore suggested as alternatives for ADHD therapy, relatively little is known about the involvement of environmental factors in ADHD-like symptomatology presented by this rat strain and to what extent 'protective' non-pharmacological factors may be considered as preventive strategies for such behavioral abnormalities.

One potential non-pharmacological approach to neurological disorders is environmental enrichment, which induces beneficial effects against cognitive dysfunctions (Kempermann et al., 1997, van Praag et al., 2000). In a broad sense, environmental enrichment is an experimental paradigm in animals which supposedly parallel physical, social and intellectual activity of humans. These include encouragements to perform physical
