Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The control group consisted of 10 men who did not participate in any physical activity during the study. The training group consisted of 10 men who participated in a 10-week training program. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions were performed at a heart rate of 150 beats per minute. The HR and HRR were measured at the beginning and end of the study. The results showed that the training group had a significantly higher HR and HRR at the end of the study compared to the control group. This suggests that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or natural light sources. To avoid this, there are two things the producer should be aware of: the time of the event.
- Artificial sources of light will come with their own set of advantages and specifications, the length of the season may differ depending on the soil, moisture, and nutrients.
- The soil and nutrient levels, depending on the way the producer plans to raise the plants, the growing medium, and the growing space, should be considered for these items of concern.
- Natural light from outside the SEU can be used.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will increase its output level until the marginal revenue is equal to the marginal cost.
