

The Variety of Maps

(by David Smith)

Many maps are designed to show a specific area of land, but they can also be used to show a variety of other information. For example, a map can be used to show the location of a city, the location of a river, or the location of a mountain range. Maps can also be used to show the distribution of a particular resource, such as oil or coal. Maps can also be used to show the distribution of a particular population, such as the distribution of the United States population.

The variety of maps is vast, and it is important to understand the different types of maps and how they are used.
