

surveys have consistently shown that the NFL is held in high regard, and the league tries hard to maintain these positive perceptions. It realizes that at the end of the day, the NFL is an energy, a symbol that represents American tradition, which if not maintained would wither away.

Joe Browne describes people's relationship with the NFL as a love affair in which the NFL and the teams have to give this love back to the people for supporting them so well. That's what the NFL does through its various programs, such as NFL charities, the NFL football fund, and the disaster relief fund that the NFL established after 9/11 to give back to the families of those killed in New York and Washington. There is charity on the field, too; each time a player is fined, the money is used to help fund various causes. Fans can get into the game by going to the auctions section on the NFL Web site, because all of the proceeds go to players' charities. According to Director of Community Affairs Beth Colleton, NFL stands for quality, tradition, and integrity—all of which come together to define Americana. The NFL captures the American energy like no other—an energy that continues to ignite goodwill with each passing season.

Conclusion

The NFL has used marketing research to foster immense goodwill and influence to make a difference to the community. The strong public service feeling at the NFL and the active involvement by NFL players in various social initiatives and programs bear testimony to how seriously the NFL takes its responsibility toward society and the immensely positive impact it has on society, all supported by marketing research. Continued reliance on marketing research can help the NFL to remain the king of professional sports.
