

Laboratory Activity 42 — Student Laboratory Packet Making Connections A Laboratory Activity for the Living Environment

Measuring Connections

In this online laboratory, students are given feedback on answers to the online test. But students themselves have selected their progress reports to be shared. Whether their progress indicates all learning objectives met or need more practice, it is the teacher's job to provide them with appropriate future instruction. Many online assessment assessments are a reflection of the progress that past test scores are showing students and their learning.

Following and explaining connections to new or other tests, students are asked to explain the results themselves. It is the teacher's job to provide feedback on the connections they are able to explain or explain. This is done by providing a new test to explain the connections. The connections are then a new online assessment.

In this part of the laboratory, students are given a new test to explain the connections between the test and the test results. The connections are then a new online assessment.

Results

Students are given a new test to explain the connections between the test and the test results. The connections are then a new online assessment.

Another online assessment is given. It is given to students to explain the connections between the test and the test results. The connections are then a new online assessment.

Students are given a new test to explain the connections between the test and the test results. The connections are then a new online assessment.

Making Connections is a laboratory activity developed by the New York State Education Department for use in the laboratory. It is a laboratory activity for the Living Environment. The connections are then a new online assessment.
