Africa's Demographic Transition David Canning, Sangeeta Raja, Abdo S. Yazbeck, 2015-10-22 Africa is poised on the edge of a potential takeoff to sustained economic growth This takeoff can be abetted by a demographic dividend from the changes in population age structure Declines in child mortality followed by declines in fertility produce a bulge generation and a large number of working age people giving a boost to the economy In the short run lower fertility leads to lower youth dependency rates and greater female labor force participation outside the home Smaller family sizes also mean more resources to invest in the health and education per child boosting worker productivity In the long run increased life spans from health improvements mean that this large high earning cohort will also want to save for retirement creating higher savings and investments leading to further productivity gains Two things are required for the demographic dividend to generate an African economic takeoff The first is to speed up the fertility decline that is currently slow or stalled in many countries The second is economic policies that take advantage of the opportunity offered by demography While demographic change can produce more and high quality workers this potential workforce needs to be productively employed if Africa is to reap the dividend However once underway the relationship between demographic change and human development works in both directions creating a virtuous cycle that can accelerate fertility decline social development and economic growth Empirical evidence points to three key factors for speeding the fertility transition child health female education and women's empowerment particularly through access to family planning Harnessing the dividend requires job creation for the large youth cohorts entering working age and encouraging foreign investment until domestic savings and investment increase The appropriate mix of policies in each country depends on their stage of the demographic transition

Governing Rural Development Lynda Cheshire, 2012-11-28 In recent decades the responsibility for initiating regeneration programmes has been placed firmly in the hands of rural communities with the rationale being that local people are best placed to know their own problems and consequently to develop their own solutions Despite the popularity of this approach the self help approach has its own problems and can be seen as an attempt by governments to reduce public spending This book provides a critical account of the discourses and practices of self help in contemporary rural development policies of Australia and other western nations Although it examines the problems of the self help approach it moves beyond a straightforward exposition of the impediments to self help Instead taking a Foucauldian governmentality perspective it puts forward a theoretical analysis of the self help concept assessing it as a means of governing rural development in an advanced liberal manner It argues that self help should not be regarded as either the empowerment or the abandonment of rural citizens by a shrinking state but rather the application of new ways of thinking about and acting upon rural development

Citizens and Service Delivery Dena Ringold,Alaka Holla,Margaret Koziol,Santhosh Srinivasan,2011-12-01 The report reviews how citizens can influence education health and social protection services through access to information and opportunities to hold providers accountable It takes stock of international evidence and experience from projects supported by the World Bank to identify knowledge gaps key questions and areas for further work
