Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet on the body composition and physical performance of 10 male, sedentary, college students. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a diet group. The diet group was instructed to consume a diet that was 1000 kcal below their estimated maintenance level. The control group was instructed to consume a diet that was at their estimated maintenance level. The diet group lost significantly more weight and body fat than the control group. The diet group also showed a significant improvement in physical performance compared to the control group. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet can lead to significant improvements in body composition and physical performance in sedentary college students.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or continuous darkness. Tapes that are too long or too short can change the phase of the clock.
- Artificially imposed rhythms will eventually alter all biological rhythms in a population, the length of the day was increased by manipulating the red and infrared light levels.
- The endogenous clock is therefore the only way to change the phase of a rhythm. The period of a rhythm is genetically determined, however, it is not subject to these periods of adjustment. Natural selection imposed the 24 hour day.
