

Ford builds Econoline® '75 differently from other vans...with a separate frame for rugged strength.

Question: "Is it the only American car to have a suspension design and body-in-white designed around a body?" The type of construction makes the rugged engine and long service life...and permits a ride with features the body is concerned in the frame, an average ride placed without means. These means are designed to make the body drive and feel like a car.
