Fenn,1992-07-31 This 1992 work is intended to be a taster to sociological method for students of the New Testament Richard Fenn demonstrates how fruitful the relationship between the social sciences and biblical studies can be when sociological method is imaginatively applied to the New Testament Fenn s point of departure is the particular historical event of the death of Herod the Great He focuses on Josephus account of the trials of Herod s sons the death of Herod himself and the crisis of succession which followed his death Josephus account is shown to provide a rich sociological resource in that he observes how speech was used to conceal rather than to convey individuals true interests and commitments His account also reveals the failure of the trial as a critically important institution for restoring confidence in public discourse The result the author argues is the intensification of conflict within and between generations at every level of Palestinian society Twelfth Night Edited by W. Turner, shakespeare s stories Perfecting Human Actions John Michael Rziha,2009 During the last few centuries a practical dichotomy between God and humans has developed within moral theory As a result moral theory tends to focus only on humans where human autonomy is foundational or only on God where divine commands capriciously rule However the moral theology of Thomas Aquinas overcomes this dichotomy For Thomas humans reach their perfection by participating in God s wisdom and love Perfecting Human Actions explores the ways humans participate in eternal law God s wisdom that guides and moves all things to their proper action The book begins with a thoughtful examination of the philosophic recovery of the notion of participation in Thomistic metaphysics It then explains Thomas s theological understanding of the notion of participation to show how humans are related to God It is discovered that when performing human actions humans participate in the eternal law in two ways as moved and governed by it and cognitively In reference to participation as moved and governed humans are directed by God to their proper end of eternal happiness This mode of participation can be increased by perfecting the natural inclinations through virtue grace and the gifts of the Holy Spirit In reference to cognitive participation humans as rational creatures can know their proper end and how to attain it Through this knowledge of moral truths the intellect participates in the eternal law Cognitive participation is perfected by the intellectual virtues especially faith and the gifts of the Holy Spirit especially wisdom The book concludes by showing how the notion of human participation in the eternal law is a much better foundation for moral theory than the contemporary notion of autonomy

ABOUT THE AUTHOR John Rziha is associate professor of theology at Benedictine College
