✓ Exclusively available on IvyPanda

Chapter 3 of Essentials of life-span development covers the physical and cognitive development during infancy. Reasonably assuming that, after Chapter 1, the student will remember that infancy is the period from birth to 18-24 months, the chapter begins with a quick discussion of physical growth and development during this period. When discussing motor skills, both gross and fine, the chapter demonstrates how in-born reflexes are gradually replaced with newly acquired reactions to stimuli (Santrock, 2012). After that, the chapter establishes the important difference between sensation as information input and perception as its cognitive interpretation, which is crucial for the student's understanding of an infant's sensory and perceptual development (Santrock, 2012). It also links the new material to the nature vs. nurture debate mentioned in the previous chapter and covers both nativist and empiricist approaches (Santrock, 2012). Finally, when discussing the infant's cognitive development, Chapter 3 covers Piaget's theory, which explores how children construct mental schemes and use them through assimilation and accommodation to create higher-order systems of behaviors (Santrock, 2012). After that, the student has a theoretical perspective to assess the following information on cognitive development in infancy.

The main strength of this chapter is that it effectively builds on the information provided earlier. For example, when discussing sensory and perceptual development, it returns to the nature vs. nurture debate first considered in some detail in the previous chapter (Santrock, 2012). Similarly, the coverage of cognitive development invokes Piaget's theory, which was, however, briefly already mentioned in Chapter 1 (Santrock, 2012). By doing so, Chapter 3 not only reinforces and actualizes the knowledge gained from previous chapters but also creates a continuous learning experience for the student.

Esteban, 2017-03-31 Mothers and fathers are the original human resource managers Whatever the era or circumstances their challenges remain constant to pass on a legacy of positive work attitudes and habits to their children In Good Better Best author Esther Esteban focuses on five work related habits diligence order responsibility cooperation and cheerfulness These are the building blocks of good work that take time and considerable training to develop. When they are practiced naturally quickly, constantly and with ease, they evolve into stable qualities of the human personality: virtues. Motivating children to do their work, school work, play, household chores, hobbies, sports and to sustain and complete tasks well are the challenges of parents, caregivers and teachers. This sequel to The Work of Children is an inspirational guide to help them in that process.

Lifespan Development Kelvin Seifert, Robert J. Hoffnug, Michele Hoffnug, 1997. The authors believe that lifespan psychology is relevant to current career and social issues that all adults face. It is especially relevant to those who will work or live with children, adolescents or the elderly. Their goal in writing this book is to present development at every stage of lifespan from a growth perspective. Preface. The authors wrote this new text to enable students to find themselves and the people they know in the story of lifespan development. It is a story of how we grow and change throughout our lives and of the continuities across every stage and domain of life. Back cover.

Counseling for Multiculturalism and Social Justice Manivong J. Ratts, Paul B. Pedersen, 2014-12-08. In this book, Drs. Ratts and Pedersen combine the very best from the multicultural and social justice traditions into a new paradigm which will guide counselors toward a deeper understanding of the connections between these two counseling forces. Significantly updated and expanded from the previous edition, this fourth edition focuses on applying multiculturalism and social justice in various clinical settings with diverse client populations. A completely new applications section contains nine chapters on working with oppressed client groups including African Americans, Asian and Pacific Islanders, Latinx, multiracial individuals, Native Americans, lesbian, gay, bisexual and questioning clients, transgender individuals, women and socioeconomically disadvantaged clients. Clients experiencing religious and spiritual concerns are discussed as well. Each of the chapters in this section provides an illustrative case study and numerous counseling examples.
