Women, Intimate Partner Violence, and the Law Heather Douglas,2021-01-15 Every year millions of women across the world turn to the law to help them live free from intimate partner violence They engage with child protection services and police and apply for civil protection orders They seek family court orders to keep their children safe from violent fathers and take special visa pathways to avoid deportation following their separation from an abuser Women are often driven to interact with the law to counteract their abuser s myriad legal applications against them While separation may seem like a solution often the abuse just gets worse Countless women who have experienced intimate partner violence are enmeshed in overlapping complex and often inconsistent legal processes They have both fleeting and longer term connections with the legal system Women Intimate Partner Violence and the Law explores how women from many different backgrounds interact with the law in response to intimate partner violence over time Drawing on their experiences of seeking help from the law this book highlights the many failures of the legal system to provide safety for women and their children The women s stories show how abusers often harness aspects of the legal process to continue their abuse Heather Douglas reveals women s complex experiences of using law as a response to intimate partner violence Douglas interviewed women three times over three years to reveal their journey through the legal process On occasion the legal system allowed some women closure However circular and unexpected outcomes were a common experience The resulting book showcases the level of endurance tenacity and patience it takes women to seek help and receive protection through law This book shows how the legal system is failing too often to keep women and their children safe and how it might do better Building Partner Capacity/security Force Assistance Scott G. Wuestner,2009 This paper examines the current Building Partner Capacity and Security Force Assistance capabilities and capacities within the United States Army as well as Department of Defense The current operational environment calls for us to look at history policy doctrine and other academic proposals to identify capability and capacity gaps As the General Purpose Force looks forward to expanding roles in Irregular Warfare Foreign Internal Defense and Security Assistance does the U S Army have the proper force structure and minimal capability to fight and win the counterinsurgency of the future This paper analyzes this construct and provides a framework for identifying proponentcy institutionalizing lessons learned from OIF and OEF as well as providing military police and governance structure as a tool for global engagement This new structural paradigm will help the United States gain access influence and build capacity throughout this new world order
