

Study Guide: Physical and Chemical Oceanography

Effective composition of seawater is determined by:

- 1) Primary salinity - given entirely by composition of source water from which seawater formed (mostly, freshwater composition of fresh water composition)
- 2) Evaporation - water leaving through salt by mass, from atmosphere following atmospheric rules, and no evaporation of salt, leaving salt behind, increasing salinity, but also increasing temperature
- 3) Biological processes - phytoplankton, zooplankton, bacteria, etc. affect oxygen and nitrogen, which affect salinity, but also affect temperature

Effective salinity and composition in reality:

- 1) Evaporation - water composition, temperature
- 2) Biological processes - phytoplankton, zooplankton, bacteria, etc. affect oxygen and nitrogen, which affect salinity, but also affect temperature

How temperature and salinity produce density, water volume, pressure, etc.

Temperature differences alone cause density:

- 1) Expansion - water expands as temperature increases, so density decreases
- 2) Contraction - water contracts as temperature decreases, so density increases
- 3) Effect - the temperature difference produces a density difference, which is related to the expansion/contraction.

Salinity differences cause density:

- 1) Water - water expands as temperature increases, so density decreases
- 2) Water - water contracts as temperature decreases, so density increases
- 3) Effect - the salinity difference produces a density difference, which is related to the expansion/contraction.

Effect:

How temperature and salinity differences produce density differences.

Expansion/contraction:

on the left, water, which contracts as temperature decreases.

Effect/contraction/expansion: is the difference in density between the water and the atmosphere.

Effect:
