Moock, Timothy E. Heleniak, 1999-01-01 Russia s educational system with broad access and high levels of scholarly achievement has long been a source of strength The Soviet system however was grossly overcentralized inefficient and lacking in accountability In the last decade attempted rapid decentralization has not been well designed since there has been no commensurate transfer of resources and levels of responsibility have remained unclear Unless corrected soon the harmful impact on educational quality and equity could be very serious The purposes of this report are to analyze the nature of the current problems and to discuss policy options open to the Russian Government in its efforts to improve educational efficiency preserving and even improving equitable access without sacrificing traditions of academic excellence This report is based on analysis of trends across the 89 Russian regions and case studies In its conclusions the report draws on this regional experience to suggest reform options Among other proposals efficiency could be increased by giving schools increased financial autonomy using of per capita financing formulae and beginning to rationalize the teaching force and improve its quality A national system of student assessment might help both to raise quality and improve the equity of access to highly selective institutions Reforms are required to improve the market responsiveness of first level vocational education and especially to avoid excessive and premature specialization Education practitioners and policy makers will find this publication of interest World Regions , Horizons States And Regions 4 ,2003-06 States and Regions countries allocate to teaching and learning materials TLMs and hurdles in the way of making textbooks available to student Some interesting findings from the study The availability of affordable textbooks to all students could be dramatically improved by devoting an estimated 3 to 4 percent of the primary education budget and 6 to 7 percent of the secondary education budget The production process methods copyright length of print runs effective procurement practices rather than the production costs should be the target of cost saving strategies The increased integration of ICTs into education in SSA can provide important opportunities for promoting availability of electronic TLMs but electronic TLMs are not a substitute for printed TLMs including textbooks
