

What does signifying the effectiveness of a treatment in a research?

An example for statistical significance in a study is when the treatment group shows a significant difference in the outcome variable compared to the control group. This indicates that the treatment has a statistically significant effect on the outcome variable. However, it is important to note that statistical significance does not necessarily imply clinical significance. It is also important to consider the magnitude of the effect and the confidence interval around the estimate of the effect size.
