

7. The diagram below represents one possible evolutionary change that could have led lobe-finned fish to develop into the first amphibians. Amphibians are animals that live on land some of their life.

This change from fins on the lobe-finned fish to legs and feet on the early amphibian is most likely due to:

- 1) a sudden mutation that changed the gills of the lobe-finned fish to lungs
- 2) increased competition between animals that had adapted to living on the land
- 3) the need to move to land because of increased competition for food in the ocean
- 4) mutations among offspring, followed by natural selection

Base your answer to questions 8 and 9 on the information in the chart below and on your knowledge of biology.

Leopard Frog Reproduction Facts

Where in New York State do leopard frogs live?	Anywhere, ponds, swamps, and other nearby water
How often do they breed?	Once each year
When do they breed, by season?	Spring until July
How many eggs does one frog produce?	3000 to 4000
How long until the hatched eggs hatch?	2 to 3 weeks
When do they reach sexual maturity?	Within 300 days or later 400 days

8. How does the ability to produce 3000 to 4000 eggs benefit the species?
- 1) It decreases the opportunity for more frogs to compete for limited resources
  - 2) More offspring are likely to survive and reproduce
  - 3) The offspring will be more widely distributed by fast-moving water
  - 4) The chance for survival and reproduction in the frogs will increase
9. One explanation for the timing and length of the leopard frog breeding season is that it occurs:
- 1) when environmental conditions are most favorable
  - 2) 300 days after the eggs have hatched the year before
  - 3) 2 to 3 weeks after female frogs have reached sexual maturity
  - 4) when there is a greater chance of mutations producing favorable variations
