

EUGENICS ON THE RISE: A REPORT FROM SINGAPORE

C. K. Chan

Singapore's National Day in August 1983 was the occasion for a remarkably explicit statement by the Prime Minister, Lee Kuan Yew, of his firm convictions on intelligence, heredity, and their implications for social policy in Singapore (1). For those of us who might have thought that vulgar eugenics had fallen into irredeemable disrepute in the hands of Nazi Germany's race hygienists, the recent developments in Singapore are a startling reminder that eugenic doctrines, in their more benign forms, retain much of their plausibility for large sectors of public opinion. Indeed, the appeal seems not to be confined to politically conservative societies, but is apparent even in the People's Republic of China, where there have been recent calls for "positive eugenics . . . to accelerate the birth of individuals possessing outstanding physical and intellectual qualities" (2).

In his National Day speech that year, Premier Lee returned to a favorite theme, i.e., the importance of the quality of human material that has sustained Singapore's impressive economic growth.¹ Coupled with his firm belief in the innate (indeed, hereditary) character of those qualities making for this success, eugenic considerations had been for quite a while an important factor in major areas of social policy in Singapore. In previous statements, public as well as private, Lee had been utterly explicit about his uncompromising elitism and his conviction that the fate of Singapore rested with an elite group of "no more than 5 per cent" who were "more than ordinarily endowed physically and mentally" (4, p. 13). This was not merely ideological cant, but was consistently carried over into social policy and most vividly typified by an elaborate tracking (streaming) system in the republic's educational set-up. For Lee, the social engineering objectives were clear (4):

We must expend our limited and slender resources [on these naturally superior individuals] in order that they will provide that yeast, that ferment, that catalyst in our society which alone will ensure that Singapore shall maintain its pre-eminent place in the societies that exist in South East Asia. . . .

Psychiatry and the Legacies of Eugenics Frank W. Stahnisch,Erna Kurbegović,2020-07-28 From 1928 to 1972 the Alberta Sexual Sterilization Act Canada s lengthiest eugenic policy shaped social discourses and medical practice in the province Sterilization programs particularly involuntary sterilization programs were responding both nationally and internationally to social anxieties produced by the perceived connection between mental degeneration and heredity Psychiatry and the Legacies of Eugenics illustrates how the emerging field of psychiatry and its concerns about inheritable conditions was heavily influenced by eugenic thought and contributed to the longevity of sterilization practices in Western Canada Using institutional case studies biographical accounts and media developments from Western Canada and Europe contributors trace the impact of eugenics on nursing practices politics and social attitudes while investigating the ways in which eugenics discourses persisted unexpectedly and remained mostly unexamined in psychiatric practice This volume further extends historical analysis into considerations of contemporary policy and human rights issues through a discussion of disability studies as well as compensation claims for victims of sterilization In impressive detail contributors shed new light on the medical and political influences of eugenics on psychiatry at a key moment in the field s development With contributions by Ashley Barlow W Mikkel Dack Diana Mansell Guel A Russell Celeste Tuong Vy Sharpe Henderikus J Stam Douglas Wahlsten Paul J Weindling Robert A Wilson Gregor Wolbring and Marc Workman Controlling the Dangerous Classes Randall G. Shelden,Pavel V. Vasiliev,2017-12-19 Throughout history the powerful have created laws developed agencies to enforce those laws and established institutions to punish lawbreakers Maintaining the social order to their advantage resulted in the systematic repression of disadvantaged groups the dangerous classes The third edition retains a historical approach to exploring patterns of social control and through current examples demonstrates how those strategies continue today The authors trace the roots of race class and gender bias in how laws are written interpreted and applied The management of dangerous classes is not a recent phenomenon there is a long history of keeping those who derive the least advantage from the status quo and therefore pose the greatest threat under control There was and is one system of justice for the privileged and a very different system for the less privileged The criminal justice system from the law to daily operations of the police courts and corrections generally comes down hardest on those with the least amount of power and influence and is the most lenient with those with the most power and influence The book raises critical questions What is a crime What is law Whose interests are served by the law and the criminal justice system What patterns are repeated generation after generation How does the criminal justice system relate to larger issues such as social inequality social class race and gender Contemplation of these topics contributes to informed public dialogue and careful deliberation about the present state and the future of criminal justice
