an important part of the process, we consider the possibility that practitioners have a strong belief in their own effectiveness. A self-efficacy belief is the degree to which individuals believe in their own ability. The self-efficacy construct is presented here, as a possible factor for understanding the process of change. We hypothesize that self-efficacy is related to change in the following manner:

THE LATEST IN THE LITERATURE OF THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES IS THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES, BY THE LATE JAMES M. SMITH, ESQ., OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO. THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES, BY THE LATE JAMES M. SMITH, ESQ., OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO. THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES, BY THE LATE JAMES M. SMITH, ESQ., OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO.

It is important to note that the authors do not suggest that the use of a "one-size-fits-all" approach to the design of a system is the best way to ensure that the system is usable. They argue that the design of a system should be based on the needs of the users and the context in which the system will be used.

Abstract: This paper examines the impact of the 1997-1998 Asian financial crisis on the performance of the Korean stock market. The results show that the Korean stock market experienced a significant decline in performance during the crisis period. The decline was more pronounced for the large-cap stocks than for the small-cap stocks. The results also show that the Korean stock market experienced a significant increase in volatility during the crisis period. The increase in volatility was more pronounced for the large-cap stocks than for the small-cap stocks. The results suggest that the Korean stock market is highly sensitive to the Asian financial crisis.

1944) showed that the average number of eggs per female that survived the diapause varied with the ratio of cold to warm days during the diapause period. It would be possible to construct a function of survival versus diapause length, but the number of days a ladybug could enter diapause is very variable in laboratory tests (Meyerowitz, 1964). This can be due to genetic and food differences. Field records indicate that some insects go into diapause when the body fat is insufficient to support them in diapause for the time they normally require for diapause. The number of days the diapause could last would depend on the fat level and would vary among insects. Even the diapause is sometimes the diapause of the overwintered adult to be placed in diapause again, because the diapause is more resistant to food deprivation than the diapause of the overwintered adult. It is more difficult to find an intermediate diapause in nature. It is also possible to distinguish the diapause of the overwintered adult from the diapause of the overwintered female, because the diapause of the overwintered female is more resistant to food deprivation.
