

Present Perfect Tense's and Past Simple Tense's Usage Comparison Research Paper

This study is oriented on the comparison of the usage of Present Perfect Tense and Past Simple Tense. It is a commonly acknowledged fact that these types of tenses belong to the most spread tenses of the English language. Quite a big deal of researches was carried out on this topic, so the results of these researches will be summarized and used as additional information about the subject stated.

Due to this fact, the Aims and Objectives of the research are in finding contrast in the usage of Past Simple Tense and Present Perfect Tense. Also, both types of tenses will be compared accordingly to the terms of usage.

Methodology

The study was carried out in the form of analyzing two newspaper articles. ("The Sun" and "The Guardian" Appendices 1 and 2 accordingly). The terms and reasons for the usage of above stated tense forms were explained. The analyzing process was followed by the Results and Conclusion sections where the findings and processes which lead to the findings are discovered and identified.

Theory

Simple Past Tense

The following statements summarize the main terms of usage of Past Simple tense:

- Permanent habits/states in the past. There should be a gap between them and the present moment (Allsop, 1982).
- Completed events in the past. There is a gap between the time referred to and the present moment (Leech, 1975).
- Single-events in the past. The duration of events is not important. There is a gap between the time referred to and the present moment (Elbaum, 1986).

Present Perfect Tense

The following statements summarize the main terms of usage of Present Perfect tense:

- States/habits leading up to the present time, there is no gap between them and the present moment (Quirk, 1973).
- A completed event in the past in a period leading up to the present time (Shepherd, 1993). There is no gap between the time referred to and the present moment.
- Completed events in the past with results in the present time. The speaker focuses on the result rather than on the action (Chalker, 1990). There is no time gap between the time referred to and the present moment.

Analysis

Sentence sample	Description of the usage of Present Perfect Tense	Description of the usage of Past Simple Tense.
There is food for thought in the fact that, after a decade of Labour government and at the same moment that the prime minister was making a speech about how important he considered science, the University of Reading announced the closure of its physics department.		A completed event in the past.
