These physicians thought a serious disease (epidemiology) caused their illness (diagnosis) and that the cause was a virus (etiology). Furthermore, they had a general idea of how the virus was spread (transmission) and they knew how to prevent it (prevention). However, they did not know how to cure it (therapy). The physician's knowledge of the disease was limited to the fact that it was a virus and that it was spread by contact with the patient. The physician's knowledge of the disease was limited to the fact that it was a virus and that it was spread by contact with the patient.
