over the last twenty five years and examines at length how well these treaties withstood the creative gales of destruction having a bearing on the production distribution and consumption of digital content The retrospective consists of two parts The first part looks back at the conference its course of events its negotiation dynamics the doctrinal differences and sharply conflicting economic interests underlying the stands taken by the main parties to negotiations and the national and transnational interest groups that sought to influence the negotiation process and outcomes The second part reflects on the outcomes and assesses with the wisdom of hindsight how appropriate the outcomes were and how well they withstood the passage of time This second aspect is the main focus of this book The retrospective is limited to the digital agenda of DipCon but for the digital agenda the DipCon is convened so soon and the Internet Treaties concluded so fast The book provides rich material for researchers studying the WIPO journey and also the practitioners by throwing light on discussions that led to a treaty that has in general withstood the trials of time

The Canadian Department of Justice and the Completion of Confederation 1867-78 Jonathan Swainger, 2011-11-01 The federal Department of Justice was established by John A Macdonald as part of the Conservative party's program for reform of the parliamentary system following Confederation Among other things it was charged with establishing national institutions such as the Supreme Court and the North West Mounted Police and with centralizing the penitentiary system In the process the department took on a position of primary importance in post Confederation politics This was particularly so up to 1878 when Confederation was completed Jonathan Swainger considers the growth and development of the ostensibly apolitical Department of Justice in the eleven years after the union of 1867 Drawing on legal records and other archival documents he details the complex interactions between law and politics exploring how expectations both inside and outside the legal system created an environment in which the department acted as an advisor to the government He concludes by considering the post 1878 legacy of the department's approach to governance wherein any problem legal or otherwise was made amenable to politicized solutions Unfortunately for the department and the federal government this left them ill prepared for the constitutional battles to come One crucial task was to establish responsibilities within the federal government rather than just duplicate offices which had existed prior to union Others were the establishment of national or quasi national institutions such as the Supreme Court 1875 and the North West Mounted Police 1873 the redrafting of the Governor General's instructions which was done between 1875 and 1877 and centralization of the penitentiary system completed by 1875 The Department benefited from a deeply rooted expectation that law was both apolitical and necessary This ideology functioned in a variety of ways it gave the Department considerable latitude for setting policy and solving problems but rationalized the appearance of politicized legal decisions It also legitimized Department officials claim that it was especially suited to review all legislation advise on the royal prerogative of mercy administer national penitentiaries and appoint judges to the bench Ultimately the fictional notion of law as apolitical and necessary placed the Department of Justice squarely in the midst of the completion of Confederation The
