Boey Kim Cheng

About the Poet :

Boey Kim Cheng (b. 1965, Singapore-) is widely regarded as one of the most promising Singapore poets to emerge in the 1990s. Boey has published four collections of poetry. Three of his works, Somewhere-bound, Another Place and Days of No Name, have won awards. For his artistic achievements, Boey received the National Arts Council Young Artist Award in 1996. He taught for 13 years at the University of Newcastle in Australia. In 2016, he joined Nanyang Technological University as an associate professor at its School of Humanities. He is currently the head of its English department.

About the Poem

The poem focuses in on climate change, habitat destruction, and the decline of everything that was once meaningful to humanity. It depicts the human race as a destructive, merciless force that has damaged the planet beyond repair, even going so far as to make it impossible for deities to survive.

One of the most important things to understand about this poem comes from the title. It's a reference to the famous English Romantic poet William Wordsworth, who is renowned for his deep love and reverence for nature. His poetry often celebrated beauty in the world, seeing it as a source of inspiration and wisdom. By choosing this title, he directly contrasts the idyllic world of Wordsworth with the damaged, polluted world the poem describes. The title suggests that the poem is an update on the world Wordsworth depicted.

Report to Wordsworth

You should be here, Nature has need of you.
She has been laid waste. Smothered by the smog, the flowers are mute, and the birds are few in a sky slowing like a dying clock.
All hopes of Proteus rising from the sea have sunk; he is entombed in the waste we dump. Triton's notes struggle to be free, his famous horns are choked, his eyes are dazed,
and Neptune lies helpless as beached as a whale,
while insatiate man moves in for the kill.
Poetry and piety have begun to fail,
As Nature's mighty heart is lying still.
O see the widening in the sky,
God is labouring to utter his last cry.
