Can you imagine going through poverty, sexual abuse, harassment, and racial discrimination and then being able to overcome the trauma? Yes, it seems almost unheard of but Oprah Winfrey managed to do it. These are extremely dreadful things to have to experience. She was able to not only overcome these obstacles but to also become a better person for it and affect lives of many people. Oprah inspired so many people and has made herself a name that will never be forgotten. The struggle she went through to reach her goals is unreal, but she teaches people that there is hope. The thought of living a childhood of terror to then having a luxurious life is hard to imagine. Oprah didn't receive all the glory without hard work and she is praised for... child. She was harassed and raped for many years. Oprah had turned to a life of rebellion and drugs. When Oprah left to live with her father he imposed strict discipline and encouraged her education. Oprah's father turned her life around by believing her and telling Oprah that she could be more than she was. With her focus on school and the encouragement of her father Oprah overcame the mental trauma of harassment and won a scholarship at a university. Oprah was unsuccessful as a news anchor and was thrown off of the air due to her being too emotional. Oprah overcame this and realized her passion for television. She decided she wanted to be a talk show host and used her obstacles to relate to people and she became the most successful female television talk show host of all time. Oprah used all her years of trauma and obstacles and used it as a way to relate to people and give them advice. She inspired people and helped people achieve goals. Oprah said "Failure is a great teacher, if you're open to it" this shows us that our mistakes can be the reason for our success, but we must accept all our failures so that we can learn from them. "Yet even as a child, she never saw her future as limited in any way" Oprah says "I never believed that would be my life. I believed I belonged to someone or something bigger than myself, my family, even Mississippi. I believed I was God's child. Therefore, I
