

European Imperialism in Africa

During the 1800s, the colonization of Africa was taken over by Europe. The countries gained money, resources, and the power while imperializing the countries of Africa. The Europeans were fascinated by the geography and the resources that Africa had to offer. Although, the imperialism did have an impact on the future of Africa. The European Imperialism in Africa influenced the future of the citizens in Africa and Africa as a whole in three ways, the forced labor or slavery from the countries with valuable resources, the forced spread of Christianity, and the decreasing amounts of resources in Africa because of the abundant amount of trade.

All across Africa, Catholic and Protestant missionaries attempted to win people to Christianity. The missionaries believed the African cultures and religions were devalued. They attempted to help Africans reject their own traditions in favor of Western civilization. They also built schools and medical clinics alongside churches. The missionaries saw the Africans as children in need of guidance. Just by the missionaries changing their religious beliefs has already influenced the future of Africa. In the poem The White Man's Burden states, "Your new-caught sullen peoples, half-devil and half child". This refers to the belief of the Europeans that Africans resigned to live a life of savagery. The missionaries would degrade the culture and society of the African people.

With all of the natural resources Africa had to offer, slavery came along with it. Countries such as Congo, which had an abundant amount of rubber and ivory, had slavery. Millions of Congolese died because of the forced labor and slavery. This influenced the future of Africa and Africans because all of their resources are now gone and are being used in other countries. While they were slaves, they had no right to any of their own country's materials. The future of Africa was also changed because of the death toll, economic change, and the environmental destruction resulting from wars. The countries also weren't able to increase any of their agricultural production because an industrialization is needed first before it is even possible to have a stable agricultural production.

The future of Africa was also influenced by the decreasing amounts of resources in Africa because of the abundant amount of trade. The imperialist countries essentially would raid any resources they could find in the African colonies. Africa contained copper, cotton, tea, diamonds, tin, palm oil, and many other resources that made Africa a gold mine. When imperialists came and raided all of Africa's valuable resources, they would be traded to other countries. European powers created a cash crop agriculture system by building a major trade network. Since the Europeans had power of the resources, they were able to create the value of the resource to whatever they wished it to be. Africa is now stripped of their resources and are lacking in many needed materials.

The Ideas That Rule Us Chris Groot, 2024-10-07

It may seem surprising that the economic choices we make in society are often determined by ideas rather than scientific evidence or financial resources The consequences of such choices are often stark such as the austerity policies which eroded our ability to withstand crises like the Covid 19 pandemic This book explores the ideas that rule how our economy works how government operates and how workers organise A small number of historical economic ideas remain stubbornly prevalent and powerful today However they are largely based on questionable assumptions about human behaviour and unproven theoretical ideas about economics They were founded within the realms of philosophy and politics rather than hard science This book illustrates how politicians have selectively borrowed convenient economic concepts in order to promote and defend policies which entrench and escalate inequalities and other structural problems This accessible book invites readers to question the ideas that rule us and explore the challenges facing society It invites progressive thought about how we need to urgently organise action for the future European

Policing and decolonisation David Anderson, David Killingray, 2017-03-01

As imperial political authority was increasingly challenged, sometimes with violence, locally recruited police forces became the front line guardians of alien law and order. This book presents a study that looks at the problems facing the imperial police forces during the acute political dislocations following decolonization in the British Empire. It examines the role and functions of the colonial police forces during the process of British decolonisation and the transfer of powers in eight colonial territories. The book emphasises that the British adopted a colonial solution to their problems in policing insurgency in Ireland. The book illustrates how the recruitment of Turkish Cypriot policemen to maintain public order against Greek Cypriot insurgents worsened the political situation confronting the British and ultimately compromised the constitutional settlement for the transfer of powers. In Cyprus and Malaya, the origins and ethnic backgrounds of serving policemen determined the effectiveness which enabled them to carry out their duties. In 1914 the Royal Irish Constabulary (RIC) of Ireland was the instrument of a government committed to Home Rule or national autonomy for Ireland. As an agency of state coercion and intelligence gathering, the police were vital to Britain's attempts to hold on to power in India, especially against the Indian National Congress during the agitational movements of the 1920s and 1930s. In April 1926 the Palestine police force was formally established. The shape of a rapidly rising rate of urban crime laid the major challenge confronting the Kenya Police.
