Crisis Management in Public Health

Introduction

Crisis management is a vital and highly crucial theme for public health and public administration in the current dynamic world. As time passes, the world is becoming increasingly dangerous and insecure and involves intractable challenges. Hence, the public health crisis is an inevitable reality facing every public health sector across the globe. Bundy et al. (2017) defined the crisis as an event that organizational stakeholders and managers see as unexpected, potentially disrupt an organization. If not well managed when it occurs, a crisis can jeopardize an organization's goals and have an intense implication on its relationship with stakeholders.

Similarly, in public health, the crisis has potentially negative implications to the overall goal of the public health sector if not well managed. Therefore, it is the role of managers, leaders, and all stakeholders in the sector to unite and work as team to ensure that crises in public health are well managed. Failure to do so will have attractive negative implications to the sector performance, and as such, the overall goal of public health will never be realized. Because of the negative implications, current research from diverse disciplines, including public health, has dedicated considerable attention to crisis management.

Nevertheless, current research evidence has indicated an increase in the health care sector's crises amid the covid19 pandemic (Stephens et al., 2020). This has caused serious disruption in the health care sector, jeopardizing service delivery. Almost all public health sectors have experienced crises associated with the covid19 pandemic. Hence, crisis management is a significant policy area for researchers, administrative executives, and public administration (Bundy et al., (2017). This has triggered researchers' attention to find a better way of managing crises, not just in public health but in all organizations faced with this global challenge. Therefore, this research aims to determine how to manage public health crises to ensure that there are sustainable working conditions.
