A SEMANTIC SPACE FOR NONVERBAL BEHAVIOR²

One of the most troublesome aspects of research in any relatively unexplored area of study is the determination of basic categories or dimensions that cut across most of the phenomena of interest. In the study of nonverbal communication, this has been an ever present problem in that numerous categories can be selected from the following realms: communication behaviors such as facial expressions, verbalizations, movements, and postures; referents such as feelings and attitudes; communicator or addressee attributes such as personality, psychological well-being, age, sex, and status; and communication media such as face-to-face, telephone, and video interactions.

For instance, one can ask, what are the important behaviors to explore in studying nonverbal communication? Immediately one faces the problem that although any behavior is in principle communicative, since it is observable and bears some kind of significance, some behaviors are more a part of communication than others (e.g., facial expressions in contrast to foot movements). The selection of nonverbal cues for study has sometimes been based on expressive qualities—than is, pathology-related (e.g., Braatoy, 1954; Deutsch, 1947, 1952; Deutsch & Murphy, 1955; or Reich, 1945); or personality-related (e.g., Allport & Vernon, 1933).
