

Study Guide: Physical and Chemical Oceanography

Effective composition of seawater is determined by:

- 1) Primary salinity - given amount of dissolved solids with respect to total weight, freshwater composition consists of 96.5% water and 3.5% solids
- 2) Source - water moving through salt balance from atmosphere through evaporation and precipitation, and ice melting/refreezing, resulting in different salinities, fresh water and sea water composition
- 3) Secondary salinization process - physical/chemical processes, biologically induced changes and changes in chemical composition of water bodies for future ocean cycles in time

Effective salinity and composition in salinity:

- 1) Equivalent - same composition, same weight
- 2) Equivalent weight - equivalent weight of substances, same composition

How temperature and salinity produce density, water volume, pressure, etc.

Temperature differences cause ocean layers:

- 1) warm water rises above cold water, cold water is more dense
- 2) warm, less dense water is floating on a colder, denser water surface
- 3) where the temperature difference persists, the water density is affected so as the circulation

Salinity differences cause ocean layers:

- 1) water with a lower salinity is less dense than water with a higher salinity
- 2) water with higher salinity, and lower density, floats above water with higher salinity
- 3) density (mass/volume) increases as salinity increases (mass/volume)
- 4) the higher the salinity, the higher the density, so the water is more dense

Effect:

low salinity and high density is replaced by high salinity and low density

Temperature effects:

on the left, warm, high salinity water, on the right, cold, low salinity water

Salinity effects: in the left, high salinity, high density water, in the right, low salinity, low density water

Pressure effects: in the left, high pressure, high density water

Volume effects: in the left, high volume, high density water
