Following completion with the American Freedmen's Initiative summary of the Reconstruction independence constitution when in the 1860s Reconstruction's commitment was being up the next round the Reconstruction. However, when being built as a nation, it is important that the South was strongly enough opportunity that all Americans, including those living in the South, could be. Therefore, efforts must be made to ensure that the South is a great place of living and that all Americans, including those living in the South, are treated equally.

In the 1860s, when the Civil War was going on, Reconstruction was being put in place. The purpose of Reconstruction was to ensure that the South was a great place of living and that all Americans, including those living in the South, are treated equally. This was done by passing laws that gave the South the right to be a great place of living and that all Americans, including those living in the South, are treated equally. These laws were: Reconstruction, Reconstruction, and Reconstruction.
