Twitter is not an API. The @-syntax, if it is not provided for users, may result in problems. There are various algorithms that increase the space partition without sacrificing optimality or consistency. It is difficult to do so. The above three are not.

The simplest way to reduce memory requirements for  $\mathcal{H}^1$  is to change the order of variable grouping in the hierarchical search scheme, resulting in the Reordered Grouping (R-GRU) algorithm. The main difference between GRU and reordered hierarchical grouping is that the search starts in the  $\mathcal{H}^0$  space, i.e. smaller than the depth, as well as before the search enters the search tree. Instead of just using the provided  $\mathcal{H}^0$  as the primary heuristic, GRU is extended to merge problems with just one node and remove the aforementioned constraint associated with grouping, i.e. ordering of nodes. Unfortunately, it suffers from the same difficulties outlined earlier, i.e. when the heuristic consists of problems with search branching factors  $b_1, \dots, b_n$ , the search space complexity is  $b_1 \times \dots \times b_n$  and the search depth is  $\max\{b_1, \dots, b_n\}$ .
