The two former environments have been identified as important groups whose activities are fundamental in defining secondary and tertiary forest succession (the relatively undisturbed forest) that forest rehabilitation projects will target. These forests are found predominantly in the phytosociological transition between undisturbed mature forest and young forest, and are important in the process of forest succession.

- These characteristics are shared by all groups of organisms, regardless of complexity or size
- Reproductive cells require a specialized reproductive structure, which are called gametes, and are produced by meiosis
- All sexually reproducing organisms undergo fertilization, which is the fusion of gametes

These self-reported behaviors were measured through four self-administered scales to assess (1) perceived drinking habits, (2) sexual behavior, (3) perceived stress, and (4) the level of self-rated psychological distress. In the self-administered drinking history, the respondents indicated in their answers the frequency of alcohol consumption in the previous 12 months and gave answers about the number of alcoholic drinks per day. In the self-rated stress, they indicated the frequency of experiencing stress in the previous 12 months. They indicated whether they had experienced any of the following symptoms in the previous 12 months: nervousness, depression,
