Nigeria Demographic and Health Survey ,1990 Use of secondary population-based databases to evaluate the safety of medications Patricia Tennis,Elizabeth Andrews, Lee Lanza,Catherine Johannes,2008-09-30 Public concern is increasing over the safety of medicines particularly serious adverse events detected after extensive use of products in the general marketplace This concern has led to the need for prompt evaluation of safety signals within large populations following drug approval The most relevant and available data resources primarily include electronic health care claims and electronic medical records and can be used to identify new safety issues and to evaluate known or suspected signals In this review paper we 1 summarize the data resources available for detection and evaluation of safety signals and 2 critically describe these resources and methods used in drug safety research For each type of data resource we summarize the characteristics and describe the associated applications and appropriate methods To place each data resource and method in perspective we provide examples from disease areas with substantial public health impact We conclude that in certain circumstances these data resources can be valuable for the relatively cost effective evaluation of serious adverse events in users of specific medications However implementation of such research requires a thorough understanding of the strengths and weaknesses of the data sources and the pharmacoepidemiologic methods used for analysis

The Influence of Attitudes, Beliefs, and Social Factors on Caregivers' Decisions on the Use of OTC Medications in Preschool Children Connie R. Ecklund, 1998 The purpose of this descriptive correlational study was to determine the extent that social factors health beliefs and attitudes influenced caregiver s decisions in home management with over the counter OTC medications Home management decisions were studied in relation to seeking professional care The association of parents decisions concerning OTC medications with social factors as well as beliefs and attitudes related to illness susceptibility and severity and medication effectiveness was examined A theoretical framework based on the Health Belief Model Rosenstock 1974 guided the conceptualization of this study A convenience sample of caregivers with an index child of 3 5 years of age was recruited through county based Head Start programs Approximately 50

caregivers completed the study instrument at monthly parent counsel meetings Data were analyzed using Pearson product moment correlational coefficient Significant correlations were noted between the age of the caregiver perception of severity of the child s illness and perception of the child s susceptibility to illness and calling the doctor for advice or intervention There were also significant correlations between both the economic status of the household and the perceived effect of OTC medications with caregiver s report of when they would give OTC medications No significant relationships were found between trust in doctors barriers to seeking care and gender of the child and either the choice of giving OTC medication or calling the doctor It has been estimated that more than 50% of all 3 year olds have been given some type of OTC medication Kogan et al 1994 Findings from this study suggest clinical counseling directions for nurses working in primary care settings
