The Research & Development department is responsible for the development of new products and processes. It is divided into two main areas: Basic Research and Applied Research. Basic Research is focused on the development of new products, while Applied Research is focused on the development of new processes. The department is organized into a hierarchical structure, with a top-level box 'RESEARCH & DEVELOPMENT' branching into 'Basic Research' and 'Applied Research'. 'Basic Research' further branches into 'Fundamental Research' and 'Applied Research'. 'Applied Research' branches into 'Product Development' and 'Process Development'. 'Product Development' branches into 'New Product Development' and 'Improvement of Existing Products'. 'Process Development' branches into 'New Process Development' and 'Improvement of Existing Processes'. Each of these branches further divides into specific sub-units and projects, with some units having multiple sub-units. The diagram uses a hierarchical tree structure with boxes connected by lines.
