

EDDYSTONE MAINS FILTER UNIT

Due to working at the transmitter electrical machinery is liable to cause interference to wireless reception. This trouble is often prevalent on board ship, where the dynamo itself may be a primary cause, with possible aggravation when fans, etc., are brought into use. Such interference can be very considerably reduced, if not entirely eliminated, by fitting a reliable filter unit. The Eddystone Mains Filter Unit has been designed specifically for this purpose and will be found most efficient. It takes the form of a small metal box, finished ripple brown to match the "670" Receiver, and is supplied with the necessary mains plug and socket. The unit is inserted between the mains supply and the receiver and takes but a few minutes to fit.

EDDYSTONE DOUBLET AERIAL

On board ship the best-in position of a single wire aerial must necessarily be brought close to metal work and attention must be paid to providing adequate insulation. Electrical interference picked off the ship's masts is liable to be picked up by the lead-in wire. The Eddystone Doublet Aerial has several advantages over a single wire aerial. The two wires forming the aerial proper can be strung in any convenient position (as high as possible), and the flexible twin insulated feeder brought in through a ventilator, porthole, etc., without the necessity of any additional insulation. The pickup of electrical interference will be much reduced and first class reception becomes possible. The aerial may be taken down and re-erected many times with little possibility of damage.

EDDYSTONE MARINE RECEIVER MODEL "670A"

Instruction Manual

The Eddystone "670A" Receiver has been designed expressly for use on board ship and incorporates a number of special features. It is also, of course, suitable for use on land and the fact that the receiver works equally well off 110 volt or higher voltage mains (either A.C. or D.C.) is often an advantage. The "670A" is fully tropicalised and is built to give long and reliable service in any climate.

The four switched ranges cover the principal short wave broadcast bands, the medium waveband, and long waves. The fifth position of the Selector Switch (marked "G") is for use when playing gramophone records. It renders the radio section of the receiver inoperative.

Band 1 ... 30 to 10.5 Megacycles. (10 to 28.5 Metres).

Band 2 ... 10.6 to 3.7 Megacycles. (28.3 to 81 Metres).

Band 3 ... 1500 to 540 Kilocycles. (200 to 557 Metres).

Band 4 ... 380 to 150 Kilocycles (789 to 2000 Metres).

The recognised broadcast bands are marked off in red. The special mechanical bandspread arrangement assists fine tuning. Because of their importance, safety precautions have been given special attention. Steps have also been taken to reduce interference to a minimum.

The superheterodyne circuit employs modern valves, full details being furnished in the circuit diagram. The quality of reproduction is excellent and the new type of speaker, which has a high flux density permanent magnet, gives ample volume.
