

Pew Health Professions Commission task force releases policy considerations for reforming health care workforce regulation

December 1995

The Pew Health Professions Commission Task Force on Health Care Workforce Regulation recently released its policy considerations for reforming the regulation of the US health care workforce. Individual copies of the report may be obtained from the Pew Health Professions Commission. This article summarizes the task force report.

BACKGROUND

The Pew Health Professions Commission was established in 1989 to help health professionals, workforce policy makers, and educational institutions respond to the changing health care system. For the past year, a task force of this commission has been scrutinizing the regulation of health care workers and recently has released recommendations and policy considerations for reforming state regulation processes.

TASK FORCE RECOMMENDATIONS

The report calls for a regulatory system that is standardized, accountable, flexible, effective, and efficient; that bases practice authority on competence; and that recognizes the potential for differently trained and named professions to deliver the same services as long as their authority is dependent on demonstrated competence. To help states develop such a system, the task force developed the following 10 recommendations and policy considerations.¹

Standardize regulatory terms. States should use standardized and understandable language for the regulation of health professionals and clearly describe these regulations for consumers, provider organizations, businesses, and the professions.

The issue relates to the confusion caused by misuse of the terms licensure, certification, and registration when referring to different tiers of regulation. Professional licensure refers to permission granted by government to engage in a business, occupation, or an otherwise lawful activity. Practice acts authorize a specific occupation or profession to provide specific services.

State certification regulates the use of specific occupational titles but does not provide service monopolies; anyone may deliver a service, but only those actually certified may use protected titles. State registration allows an individual to register with a state authority without necessarily meeting standards for entry to practice or continued competence. Most state health professional regulation is licensure (ie, establishing minimum standards, practice acts, and sanctioning mechanisms for violations). The task force members believe state legislators should use the term licensure to refer to any regulation of practice acts and title protection and should decline to use the term certification, leaving it to the exclusive use of private sector credentialing bodies.

Standardize entry-to-practice requirements. States should standardize entry-to-practice requirements and limit them to assessments of health professionals' competence. This would facilitate health care professionals' physical and professional mobility. Policy considerations include: adopting uniform entry-to-practice standards for each profession; adopting mutual recognition of licensure by endorsement legislation; using standard competency examinations to test minimum competence for entry-to-practice; recognizing alternative pathways in education, previous experience, and combinations of these to satisfy some entry-to-practice requirements for licensure; and eliminating entry-to-practice standards that are not based on professionals' competence, skills, training, or knowledge.

The issues are the lack of uniformity in entry-to-practice requirements among the states, the fact that current entry-to-practice standards are not limited to competence, and the lack of accountability to the public in current regulatory systems. Lack of standardization creates unreasonable barriers to interstate mobility for many professionals (eg, dentists). Integrated health care delivery systems and interstate telemedicine, workforce downsizing, and the increasing mobility of the population are reasons to standardize entry-to-practice requirements.

Current entry-to-practice requirements for education and training from accredited institutions are rigid and inconsistent, and they hamper professional mobility within professions and between related professions, thus restricting the rational and effective use of the health care workforce. Existing entry-to-practice standards, by
