and rigorous assurances of the trustworthiness of designs and also that there is greater reason to expect that these benefits can be realised The papers presented at this workshop consider the application of mathematics to hardware design at several different levels of abstraction At the lowest level of this spectrum Zhou and Hoare show how to describe and reason about synchronous switching circuits using UNiLY a formalism that was developed for reasoning about parallel programs Aagaard and Leeson use standard mathematical techniques to prove correct their implementation of an algorithm for Boolean simplification The circuits generated by their formal synthesis system are thus correct by construction Thuau and Pilaud show how the declarative language LUSTRE which was designed for programming real time systems can be used to specify synchronous circuits
