Crash Course in Gaming Suellen S. Adams, 2013-11-25 Video games aren't just for kids anymore. This book will describe the why and how to start or expand a video gaming program in the library including some specific examples of how to target adult and female gamer patrons. Gaming supplies more than just visual stimulation and empty entertainment; it can also promote socialization as well as the learning of both traditional and new literacies required to succeed in the modern world. Problem solving, multi-tasking, complex decision making on the fly, and reading the combination of words and graphics are vital skills for the 21st century, all of which are required to play video games. Crash Course in Gaming discusses the pros and cons of gaming, the types of games and game systems, circulating collections, and game programs. It explains how a library's video game program can and should do much more than simply draw younger users to the library, providing examples of how everyone from parents to senior citizens can benefit from a patron-oriented computer gaming program. The appendices also include specific games, programs, review sources, and sources for further information. Halo 3 ODS David Hodgson, 2009. Also covers all 24 Halo 3 multiplayer maps. Virtual Travel and Victorian Realism connects the Victorian fascination with virtual travel with the rise of realism in nineteenth-century fiction and twenty-first-century experiments in virtual reality. Even as the expansion of river and railway networks in the nineteenth century made travel easier than ever before, staying at home and fantasizing about travel turned into a favorite pastime. New ways of representing place: 360-degree panoramas, foldout river maps, exhaustive railway guides offered themselves as substitutes for actual travel. Thinking of these representations as a form of virtual travel reveals a surprising continuity between the Victorian fascination with imaginative dislocation and twenty-first-century efforts to use digital technology to expand the physical boundaries of the self.
