Women Write Iran Nima Naghibi, 2016-05-01 Women Write Iran is the first full length study on life narratives by Iranian women in the diaspora Nima Naghibi investigates auto biographical narratives across genres including memoirs documentary films prison testimonials and graphic novels and finds that they are tied together by the experience of the 1979 Iranian revolution as a traumatic event and by a powerful nostalgia for an idealized past Naghibi is particularly interested in writing as both an expression of memory and an assertion of human rights She discovers that writing life narratives contributes to the larger enterprise of righting historical injustices By drawing on the empathy of the reader spectator witness Naghibi contends life narratives offer the possibilities of connecting to others and responding with an increased commitment to social justice The book opens with an examination of how the widely circulated video footage of the death of Neda Agha Soltan on the streets of Tehran in June 2009 triggered the articulation of life narratives by diasporic Iranians It concludes with a discussion of the prominent place of the 1979 revolution in these narratives Throughout the focus is on works that have become popular in the West such as Marjane Satrapi s best selling graphic novel Persepolis Naghibi addresses the significant questions raised by these works How do we engage with human rights and social justice as readers in the West How do these narratives draw our attention and elicit our empathic reactions And what is our responsibility as witnesses to trauma atrocity and human suffering

Ahmadi, 2024-11-12 Although the Iran Iraq War of the 1980s has been much studied Ahmadi is opening new avenues by examining the social history of the Iranian border province of Khuzistan One of the oldest and richest provinces in Iran its invasion by Saddam Hussein's Ba'athist forces in 1980 triggered the war but the contested region has a deeper history that sheds light on questions of citizenship migration and smuggling vital to the two countries relationship in the 20th century Through archival work and oral histories Ahmadi investigates how border dwellers provincial leaders and migrants in the region affected Iran and Iraq's history before during and after the war while studying broader issues of borders and liminality in the region Although pressured by the government based in Tehran the inhabitants of Khuzistan nevertheless resisted Iranian nationalistic appeals as well as attempts to control the border and instead negotiated local identities and relations amongst themselves as a result of the province's diverse make up with a majority of inhabitants composed of Arabs rather than Persians Migrants or refugees from Iraq were often allowed entrance to the province and smuggling across the border in both directions was common and seldom restricted Ahmadi examines the role this transnational movement had in the war and the tactics both countries took to control the oil rich region beginning in the 1920s and setting up the role the province would play Residents were pressured from one side with nationalistic propaganda about their place in the country and with a pan Arabic argument from the other that sought to separate them from Persian Iran with provincial leaders trying to obtain the best of both worlds by playing the sides off one another Ahmadi demonstrates how religious leaders sought to keep the peace but how some residents were nevertheless radicalized by separatist factions giving Iraq a toehold in the province and leading to civil unrest after the Islamic Revolution that preceded the invasion In the meantime Saddam Hussein expelled Iranians living in Iraq despite having wooed the Arabs of Khuzistan Ahmadi explores the nuanced arguments the Ba athist Party made to distinguish these actions while also exploring the steps that the new Islamic Republic of Iran took to incorporate Khuzistan into its vision for the country Last she examines the aftermath of the US invasion of Iraq and the collapse of the Ba ath Party through the lens of Khuzistan and the consequences for that region Theoterrorism v.
