

Types of respiration

All living cells respire to release energy. Organisms need energy for everything they do (for example, making new substances, moving).

Aerobic respiration is a series of chemical reactions that can be summarised as:

Energy is released (but is not a chemical substance and so is not shown in the word equation).

Carbon dioxide can be detected using:

- limewater (which it turns cloudy)
- an indicator (such as hydrogen carbonate) because it is acidic.

Anaerobic respiration does not require oxygen. In humans it is used to release energy from glucose when more energy is needed than can be supplied by aerobic respiration (for example, during strenuous exercise).

Anaerobic respiration causes muscles to tire quickly and so cannot be used for extended periods. A lot of the lactic acid travels from the muscles to the liver, where it is converted back to glucose. Anaerobic respiration releases less energy than aerobic respiration.

After strenuous exercise, the body needs extra oxygen. This excess post-exercise oxygen consumption (EPOC) (or 'oxygen debt') replaces oxygen lost from oxygen stores (in the blood and in muscles) and provides oxygen for increased levels of aerobic respiration (for example, to provide energy for removing lactic acid, for faster breathing, for faster heart rate).

Gas exchange

Different organisms use different organs for gas exchange (swapping one gas for another):

- gills (e.g. fish)
- skin (e.g. frogs)
- stomata in leaves (plants)
- lungs.
