Cognitive and Behavioral Performance Factors in Atypical Aging Mark L. Howe, Michael J. Stones, Charles J. Brainerd, 2012-12-06 It is a truism that as we age there are a number of underlying physiological changes conspiring to alter our level of behavioral and cognitive functioning. Despite the inherent interrelatedness of these behavioral and cognitive changes, all too often the papers we read confine themselves to specific isolated components of the developing process. Although exceptions naturally exist, we believe that these exceptions should become rule. Although an integrated approach is important in all areas of adult development, it is perhaps particularly germane in the study of atypical aging. Here changes in overall functioning can occur in rapid succession with the synchrony of decline between different subprocesses making it difficult to factor changes in one process from changes in another. For example, because changes in cognitive functioning co-occur with other dramatic changes in motoric response capacities, it is unclear how one can effectively study changes in the ability to cognize independent of changes in the very mechanisms ability to execute motor sequences so often used to index cognitive performance.
