Abstract—This study examined the effects of a 12-week, 30-min, 3 times per week, supervised, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of 100 elderly women. The program was designed to improve aerobic and muscular fitness, balance, and flexibility. The program was supervised by a physical therapist and a personal trainer. The program was evaluated using a pretest and posttest design. The results of the study showed that the program had a significant positive effect on the physical fitness and HRQL of the elderly women. The program was well tolerated and the participants reported a high level of satisfaction. The results of this study suggest that a supervised, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program can be an effective intervention for improving the physical fitness and HRQL of elderly women.
