Reading the article makes one ponder about society investing so much time in these shows. What is the factor that makes shows like Jersey Shore more profitable than programs that have an educational element or documentary techniques? The answer surely appeals to a psychology professor but many from a marketing stand point could offer a simple answer. Viewers tune in because reality television often reassures that very viewer that his or her life is better than the individuals who participate in the program. It creates an ability for viewers to see how bad people's lives can be, for instance the program Hoarders on A&E documents the tragedy of individuals with very strong obsessive compulsive disorder who hoard or keep material items in some instances for decades. All of these things begin to pile up in the dwelling of these hoarders and makes it impossible for someone to live a normal life. Loved ones appeal to the show to offer psychological help and the genre of the show is actually defined by Ouelette and Murray as a "makeover/lifestyle" genre (Silverman, Rader 172). The issue here is derived from the idea of the show, which is to provide entertainment. This is sort of an ethical issue because hoarders themselves know they have a problem and it is very serious but the viewer watches this program and is supposed to be entertained for 48 minutes. It is difficult for one to imagine that someone can enjoy the situation which is highlighted in the series, it merely does what is said above: it reassures the viewer that his or her life is currently and relatively better than in the programs he or she watches.

Another issue one should consider when discussing reality television is the proliferation of the character. It is not up to a writer or producer to determine the behavior of a participant (with the exception of choosing the participant of course, but after this the producer is powerless to determine the behavior). This is a disadvantage to those who run the show but one could argue that it dilutes the ability to create a dense and complicated character. Surely there are exceptions to the prior statement but in general it holds true. The advantage writers and producers have on scripted shows have produced
