

HOW TO WRITE A COLLEGE APPLICATION ESSAY

By Margaret Metzger
Brookline High School, Massachusetts

Many colleges require a short essay as part of the application process. The directions for the essay vary from college to college. Most colleges offer some variation of the topic. "Tell us more about yourself."

Like most students, you might hate this subject and dread writing the essay. You know that it is a crucial piece of writing and that it must be done, but secretly you hope somehow to avoid the task. Like most tasks, the tension created by procrastinating is worse than the work itself-in this case, just sitting down and writing the essay.

You can use the college essay to strengthen your application. In fact, your essay can be the strongest part, presenting you as a thoughtful, sincere, interesting applicant. You can use the college essay to explain mistakes of the past-failed courses, low SAT® scores, or few extracurricular activities. Best of all, you can demonstrate that you know how to write well, an ability all colleges value.

FIND A TOPIC

Colleges genuinely want to know who you are. Although it is difficult to believe, they do not have an "ideal student" in mind. They want a variety of students. They understand that they can't know everything about you by your grade point average and your SAT scores. They want to know what kind of person you are, what aspirations you have, what struggles you have gone through, what is important to you. They ask you to write an essay about yourself because they want more personal information.

Before you write, think about how you may be different from other applicants. What unusual experience would you bring to the college? What interests, activities, travel, struggles, or situations have had a particular impact on you? You are probably thinking, "Nothing is special about me; I'm just an average kid." That's what most students think. Sometimes it helps to ask other people what they think is unique about you.

If you know exactly what you want to write about, you are lucky. Use that topic. Be sure to consider the traditional, but appropriate and effective, topics, such as academic achievements, extracurricular activities, travel and work experiences, and life-changing events.

The College Application Essay Kedra Beth Ishop, 2008 This study aims to develop a method for more clearly understanding the topics that applicants choose when writing their college or university application essay As such the purpose of this dissertation is two fold First to analyze the unstudied volume of advice and guidance available to applicants on the World Wide Web this study will analyze the guidance that is available to motivate and guide applicants as they embark on writing their essay Second this study examines the college application essay and will create a categorization of the application essay topics on which a select group of applicants chose to write The purpose is not to evaluate the applicant or their demographics nor is it to suggest best practices for college applicants to follow when writing their essays Furthermore as an examination of popular media and of narrative expression this analysis does not attempt to reveal a causal link between media and the resulting narratives Instead this inductive analysis develops a baseline theory that begins a discussion of the application essay and the multitude of information that might guide its creation The motivation for this study is grounded in the following 1 many colleges and universities employ selective practices in their admissions process and they consider the application essay to be a helpful tool in selecting from among otherwise academically eligible students 2 applicants consider the essay to be one of the most challenging and unfamiliar aspects of the application and 3 a multi million dollar industry has developed to assist students with college and university applications This research supports prior studies that indicate that the writing of college application essays or personal statements is in fact as Paley 1996 suggests an exercise in a rhetorical conundrum Applicants emerge from the angst and confusion of how to approach and what to write about in their college application essay to produce a work that reveals personal characteristics that they think are important to college admissions officers and that they hope will ultimately result in admission to their institution of choice
