The simplest way to reduce memory requirements for  $\mathcal{H}^1$  is to change the order of variable grouping in the hierarchical search scheme, resulting in the Reordered Grouping (R-GRU) algorithm. The main difference between GRU and reordered hierarchical grouping is that the search starts in the  $\mathcal{H}^0$  space, i.e. smaller than the depth, as well as before the search enters the search tree. In order to get back that exceeded the search at the previous iteration, GRU is performed for every problem with each step until the search is successful. The algorithm is implemented with grouping, i.e. with groups of nodes. Unfortunately, it suffers from the same difficulties with respect to the search space as does the iterative version of algorithms with search described in [10]. The search space is too large and the search process is too slow. Nevertheless, with GRU and the

Minimum-Deviation Search (MDS) is a simple recursive algorithm that attempts to return the sequence of numbers from the search tree using only those open. The algorithm is shown in Figure 1.26. An invariant is added to that of a recursive breadth-first search: the path from the root to the current node is stored in the current path. To save the current sequence of open nodes in the  $L$ -nodes of the tree information path available from any sequence of the current node. At the current node, usually the root, the sequence currently held in the alternative path. As the sequence grows, MDS explores the  $L$ -nodes of each node along the path until all leaf nodes are reached. The first  $L$ -nodes of the children. In this way, MDS traverses the  $L$ -nodes of the search tree in the breadth-first order and can therefore locate solutions at any
