Federal Register, 2012-06 How We Teach Science John L. Rudolph, 2019-06-01 Despite an enduring belief that science should be taught there has been no enduring consensus about how or why This is especially true when it comes to teaching scientific process John Rudolph shows that how we think about and teach science will either sustain or thwart future innovation and determine how science is perceived by the public Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications United States. Superintendent of Documents, 1983 Scientists' Expertise as Performance Joris Vandendriessche, Evert Peeters, Kaat Wils, 2015-10-06 The essays in this collection explore our reliance on experts within a historical context and across a wide range of fields including agriculture engineering health sciences and labour management Contributors argue that experts were highly aware of their audiences and used performance to gain both scientific and popular support Scientists in the Classroom J. Rudolph, 2002-05-02 During the 1950s leading American scientists embarked on an unprecedented project to remake high school science education Dissatisfaction with the soft school curriculum of the time advocated by the professional education establishment and concern over the growing technological sophistication of the Soviet Union led government officials to encourage a handful of elite research scientists fresh from their World War II successes to revitalize the nation's science curricula In Scientists in the Classroom John L Rudolph argues that the Cold War environment long neglected in the history of education literature is crucial to understanding both the reasons for the public acceptance of scientific authority in the field of education and the nature of the curriculum materials that were eventually produced Drawing on a wealth of previously untapped resources from government and university archives Rudolph focuses on the National Science Foundation supported curriculum projects initiated in 1956 What the historical record reveals according to Rudolph is that these materials were designed not just to improve American science education but to advance the professional interest of the American scientific community in the postwar period as well

Parliamentary Papers Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons, 1918 A History of Scientific Journals Aileen Fyfe, Noah Moxham, Julie McDougall-Waters, Camilla Mørk Røstvik, 2022-10-03 Modern scientific research has changed so much since Isaac Newton's day it is more professional collaborative and international with more complicated equipment and a more diverse community of researchers Yet the use of scientific journals to report share and store results is a thread that runs through the history of science from Newton's day to ours Scientific journals are now central to academic research and careers Their editorial and peer review processes act as a check on new claims and findings and researchers build their careers on the list of journal articles they have published The journal that reported Newton's optical experiments still exists First published in 1665 and now fully digital the Philosophical Transactions has carried papers by Charles Darwin Dorothy Hodgkin and Stephen Hawking It is now one of eleven journals published by the Royal Society of London Unrivalled insights from the Royal Society's comprehensive archives have enabled the authors to investigate more than 350 years of scientific journal publishing The editorial management business practices and financial difficulties of the Philosophical Transactions and its sibling Proceedings reveal the meaning and purpose of journals in a changing scientific community At a time when we are surrounded by calls to reform the academic publishing system it has never been more urgent that we understand its history Fermilab Lillian Hoddeson, Adrienne W.
