Explanation and Progress in Security Studies Fred Chernoff,2014-08-20 Explanation and Progress in Security Studies asks why Security Studies as a central area of International Relations has not experienced scientific progress in the way natural sciences have and answers by arguing that the underlying reason is that scholars in Security Studies have advanced a range of different notions of explanation or different criteria of explanatory superiority to show that their positions are better than rival positions To demonstrate this the author engages in in depth content analysis of the generally recognized exemplars of explanation and explanatory superiority in three of the core debates in the disciplines Why do states pursue policies of nuclear proliferation Why do states choose to form the alliances they do And why do liberal democratic states behave the way they do toward other liberal democracies The book reveals that authors in the debates that have shown the most progress use similar criteria in arguing for and against the key explanations In the nuclear proliferation debate there is wide divergence in the criteria the most visible authors use and there is wide divergence in the explanations offered In the alliance formation balance of power debate there is some overlap of criteria the most important authors use and there has been some limited movement toward consensus In the democratic peace debate there has been much more overlap of criteria the most prominent authors use and there is agreement on both some positive and negative conclusions SILVER COURSE ***

Digital Modernism Jessica Pressman, 2014-02 Digital Modernism examines how and why some of the most innovative works of online electronic literature adapt and allude to literary modernism. Digital literature has been celebrated as a postmodern form that grows out of contemporary technologies, subjectivities, and aesthetics, but this book provides an alternative genealogy. Exemplary cases show electronic literature looking back to modernism for inspiration and source material in content, form, and ideology through which to critique contemporary culture. In so doing, this literature renews and reframes rather than rejects a literary tradition that it also reconfigures to center around media. To support her argument, Pressman pairs modernist works by Pound, Joyce, and Bob Brown with major digital works like William Poundstone's Project for the Tachistoscope, Bottomless Pit (2005), Young Hae Chang Heavy Industries's Dakota, and Judd Morrissey's The Jew's Daughter. With each pairing, she demonstrates how the modernist movement of the 1920s and 1930s laid the groundwork for the innovations of electronic literature. In sum, the study situates contemporary digital literature in a literary genealogy in ways that rewrite literary history and reflect back on literature's past, modernism in particular, to illuminate the crucial role that media played in shaping the ambitions and practices of that period.

Field Notes Zachary Lockman, 2016-03-30 Field Notes reconstructs the origins and trajectory of area studies in the United States, focusing on Middle East studies from the 1920s to the 1980s. Drawing on extensive archival research, Zachary Lockman shows how the Carnegie, Rockefeller, and Ford foundations played key roles in conceiving, funding, and launching postwar area studies, expecting them to yield a new kind of interdisciplinary knowledge that would advance the social sciences while benefiting government agencies and the American people. Lockman argues, however, that these new academic fields were not simply a product of the Cold War or an instrument of the American national security state, but had roots in shifts in the humanities and the social sciences over the interwar years as well as in World War II sites and practices. This book explores the decision-making processes and visions of knowledge production at the foundations, the Social Science Research Council, and others charged with guiding the intellectual and institutional development of Middle East studies. Ultimately, Field Notes uncovers how area studies as an academic field was actually built, a process replete with contention, anxiety, dead ends, and consequences both unanticipated and unintended.

Sociocultural Studies in Education Richard A. Quantz, 2016-01-08 Sociocultural Studies in Education

Critical Thinking for Democracy fills a void in the education of educators and citizens in a democracy It explores some of the fundamentals around which disagreements in education arise It presents a process with which those new to these debates can understand often confusing and entwined sets of facts and logics This book leads the reader through some general concepts and intellectual skills that provide the basis for making sense out of the debates around public education in a democracy This book can be seen as a primer on how to read texts about education It acknowledges that good teachers must be not only trained to teach but also educated about education It presents the various themes and currents found within the arguments and narratives that people use to represent public education It assumes that the more those interested in education know about how to see through the rhetoric the better they will be at discerning whose interests are served by which texts
